

The Beasley Brothers, Canada in the Rough

The Beasley Brothers are true Canadian boys who love to be in the woods. These three brothers have been chasing whitetail bucks since they were old enough to hunt and have taken dozens of giant trophies with rifles, shot guns, muzzleloaders and archery gear. The boy's passion for hunting kept them in the woods every spare moment they had. They became proficient and consistent at patterning and understanding big mature bucks. Over the years this has led to many incredible close encounters with one of North America's wariest game animals.

The brothers went on to create and publish Ontario Monster Whitetails Magazine, own and operate FROW the Big Game Records of Ontario and co-host Canada's most watched Hunting Adventure show, "Canada in the Rough".

From their humble roots in Peterborough Ontario the brother's love nothing more than sharing their incredible wildlife encounters and hunts with the rest of the world through TV.

Amanda Lynn Mayhew-Hare, Cabela's Pro Staff

Purpose-driven Canadian Celebrity Outdoors Woman and Pro Staff for Cabela's Canada emerged as one of the top female hunters in the industry; devoted to encourage, educate and promote women and children in our hunting heritage.

Amanda Lynn's passion for hunting emerged at an early age, and flourished under her parent's guidance in the great Northern Ontario outdoors in Manitowadge, a small town off of the Trans Canada Highway. Growing up immersed in nature also fostered her enthusiasm for health and wellness. Her latest project, O.W.H.A (Ontario Women's Hunting Association) has merged her passion of hunting to further educate women and get them out hunting. Struggling with her illness (Graves Disease), she has found the passion that keeps her going, intertwined with her dedication of community and fitness. Watch for her new show airing March 2017 called JUST HUNT on WILD TV!

Mike Miller, Host Angler & Hunter TV

Mike Miller's love for the outdoors, hunting and fishing, started at a young age. Like most hunters and anglers, conservation was a value instilled in him by his parents and mentors, and is still a big part of his passion.

Growing up, Mike spent time in the woods with family and friends whenever he could. When school was done for the day and during summer holidays, there was a good chance Mike was on the water fishing or in the woods tracking wildlife trying to get a closer look.

At the age of 21, Mike won his first competitive bass fishing event. He has since become one of Canada's most successful professional bass anglers, with 26 major tournament wins.

It's evident Mike loves to fish but he also truly loves to hunt. His love of hunting and being in the woods is what he says "makes him tick." Once hunting season opens, Mike is in the field as much as possible scouting, photographing and hunting everything from Grouse to bear, and has had success with countless game species. Mike loves upland bird hunting and calling in wild turkey, but he looks forward most to deer and bear season.

"Getting up close and personal with big game makes my heart race and truly tests my hunting skills," says Mike.

Mike's TV career began shortly after he finished touring as a bass fishing pro and promoting various sponsors, after producing his own show on a local TV station he was quickly in 2002 he was quickly recognized and snapped up by a National program In 2004 to become co-host and co-producer of the popular Fish'n Canada show, where he honed his on-air skills.

In 2011, Mike joined the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters award winning Angler & Hunter Television as host and executive producer. He launched the show's 19th season in January 2012, since then Mike's name has become synonymous with Canadian outdoor enthusiasts.

Pete Garnier, Quantum Pro Staff

Pete is well known multi-species angler from Trenton Ontario who has long competed in fishing tournaments in both Canada and the US. Outside of competitive angling Pete loves to chase trophy panfish like crappie, perch, and big bluegill; and does manage to fit in guiding a few select clients every year. In several tournament circuits, he is known as the "Canadian Frog-Man" and earned a reputation as a top-water expert; but Pete is quick to point out that to be able to survive on tour with any level of consistency being truly versatile on the water has always been the real key to success. Versatility was instrumental throughout his career earning several Angler of the Year and Team of the Year titles as well as being crowned the CSFL National Classic Champion. regardless of your angling experience or skill level, Pete has a long history of sharing information, tips and tricks and helping others improve their angling game.

Host & Creator - Carlin Riley – The Real Outdoor Experience

I grew up in South Western Ontario and began hunting, fishing and camping with my Father. Throughout my life, the times spent with my Dad either in a canoe or walking through a field have made a deep impact and helped shape whom I am today. Over the years, friends and family would get together and we'd drive the various properties we had permission to hunt and we were very successful at putting venison in the freezer. I love whitetail hunting and harvested my share of deer. I had thought about bow hunting deer but had no idea where to begin or even how to go about it. Exactly the same thing happened with turkey hunting. We had a season and I took a course and got a license – now what? TV episodes showed turkey kills – presumably on private farms with high populations – but what about an average guy who hunts on public land? What about the average person that works all week and has a short window to get outdoors and take part in these activities? Is it realistic to expect what is shown on TV or is this setting them up for frustration and failure? Where do you start? My goal is to provide that road map and to help others get up and running – from a real perspective – with conditions similar to what the average hunter will be up against. This concept is so important for our youth, to mentor and instill the values, ethics and conservation habits in my kids and those who do not have an outdoors mentor. It is a privilege to capture and share my outdoor experiences with my viewers and to help guide them so that they can get their kids outdoors. The Real Outdoor Experience encompasses this concept and acts as a one-stop gateway for each of the activities captured on video. It is our hope and mission, that everyone will embrace the outdoors, act responsibly, ethically and morally and at the same time become educated so they become successful.

Co-Host / Business Manager -Ian McCleary – The Real Outdoor Experience

Central Ontario is an outdoorsman's paradise – I had deer, moose and bear all within an hours' drive of my home growing up – but what really got my hunting instincts going was ruffed grouse. Partridge my grandfather called them. As a very young boy I would walk behind him in the woods, dreading the thunder of the flush that told us we'd blown it! Hunting with a .22 or .410 we had to catch them on the ground. To this day, after hunting all kinds of big game, one of my favourite hunts is still-hunting through brambles and tag alders with frost on the ground, fall leaves in full colour – and the smell of a spent .410 shell and the feel of a warm grouse in my hand. Our audience knows what I mean. My introduction to deer hunting was similar to Carlin's though using rifles up north as opposed to shotguns. I began bow hunting because of the longer season and the ability to hunt on Sundays. I learned by mistake and it took a few years to become truly proficient, but I became a better hunter. Scent when driving deer isn't important – 25 yards or 150 – didn't matter. Wind direction? Weather? Doesn't really matter – but it sure does when you have a 40 yard range and slender piece of carbon in your hand! What's interesting now is that even when using a rifle I use bow-hunting tactics and my success rate is far greater than the rest in my camp. These are the lessons that we want to share. Turkeys were my nemesis. 3 seasons it took before I finally carried a Jake out of the woods and when I look back, the mistakes I made were so obvious but I had no one to show me differently. Now I know better and all of my nephews connected on mature Toms on their first hunts. So what's changed? These are the lessons we want to share through The Real Outdoor Experience.

Steve and Jacquie Shore, Hosts of Hitmen Canada's Brotherhood of The Hunt and The SpecialistsTV

This husband and wife team shares an obsession for the outdoors

When they first met, what brought them together was their mutual passion for anything hunting, fishing and nature in general. No one was surprised when they spent their honeymoon on a remote Northern Ontario Moose hunt.

The duo started filming their passion for the world to see. It wasn't long before they made a name for themselves and became successful in the United States and Canadian national Television market. Being from Canada, that is where their heart has always been, and in 2012 started their own production company and brought their production home to Canada where they felt it is always belonged.

With their experience in the TV industry , they have created one of the fastest rising Canadian outdoor shows in history, Hitmen Canada's Brotherhood Of The Hunt and The Specialists.

They are the proud parents of 4 children who are very passionate about the outdoors in their own right.

Steve and Jacquie have hunted all over North America and Africa and came to realize their true passion is moose hunting.

Steve has successfully harvested over 23 moose with his bow, of which many have made it into the record books including an the time the 2nd largest moose shot with a bow in Ontario

The couple now feels complete, bringing home their production with the creation of Digital Moose Media and Nature Productions Canada.
